

FALL 2017

Oxford, England

Join resident director Jacqueline Morrison for the adventure of a lifetime in Oxford. Jacqueline received her BA from ACU and her MA in British imperial history from Oxford Brookes University. She has worked with the ACU in Oxford program since 2003 and loves watching students broaden their horizons through travel, learning, and living in the local community.

Dr. Kelly Elliott, associate professor of history and global studies, has a PhD in Modern British history and specializes in the history of Christianity and missionary expansion in Britain and the British Empire during the nineteenth century. She studied abroad in London as an undergraduate student. Dr. Jeremy Elliott, professor in ACU's Language and Literature department, specializes in the study of literature and the environment. He teaches a wide variety of literature courses, and looks forward to drawing connections between the historical environment of Oxford and the literature we'll be studying there. Drs. Kelly and Jeremy Elliott lived in Hampstead for much of the 2009 school year while completing dissertation research. Their time in the UK has cemented their love for canal walks, tea, and pasties. They look forward to experiencing Oxford with ACU students and their three-year-old son, Silas.
